

This week has been quite unproductive for most of us, myself included. I only did about half of what I expect of myself. Most of the sprint have consisted of me learning how React interacts with Spring and React in general, which is something I will continue to do in the next sprint.

Many people are having trouble with React which is something I hope I can be part in solving next week. It seems like some time will be spent on getting everyone up to speed with the project so that everyone has somewhat of a grasp on all the aspects of the app, which will be interesting.

Next week I want to deliver more content, and feel motivated to get out of the work slump which I am currently in.